

Environmental Resources

Terry Link <20676tpl@msu.edu>

Publishers and readers are invited to send material for this column to Terry Link, Environmental Resources Editor, Electronic Green Journal, Main Library, Michigan State University, East Lansing, MI 48824-1048 USA. TEL: 517-355-1751 FAX: 5517-353-8706.

This column presents, in brief form, news reports, announcements, calls for papers, and lists of organizations, conferences, and publications of interest to Electronic Green Journal readers. Some publications cited in this column may be reviewed in later issues, but appear here to provide timely notice of new titles. Though most resources cited here are new, some are not, but are presented for the benefit of readers who may not already be familiar with them. Every effort is made to provide descriptive annotations when possible.

As we observe the 25th anniversary of Earth Day a new organization has been established to focus on environmental concerns in the Pacific Northwest. Northwest Environment Watch (NEW) focuses on the region stretching west from the crest of the Rocky Mountains and from northern California to Southeast Alaska. NEW is a non-profit research center which relies on private contributions and grants from foundations and does not solicit funds from corporations. The publications from NEW are directed to all Northwesterners with decisions to make about the future -- from elected officials to students, from community activists to business executives, and from news editors to concerned citizens. The publications include NEW Reports, concise monographs addressing the topics and challenges relating to the Northwest. NEW Indicators are short, four to eight page publications that help Northwesterners gauge sustainability and quality of life in the Northwest.

NEW Report No. 1, State of the Northwest, published in October 1994 is in the form of a preliminary audit of the regional ecosystems. The audit follows one imaginary female salmon on the journey from Idahos Salmon River, through forests, farmlands, and cities, to the Pacific Ocean and final return to the Salmon River to spawn. This report is published on recycled paper, using vegetable-based ink.

THE WORLD'S FIRST "GREEN SHOPPING CENTER" LAUNCHES ON THE INTERNET

TEL: 212-564-4664; Fax: 212-695-7108 <http://www.ecomall.com/ecomall/eco-info@ecomall.com>

Ecology America, Inc. and Virtual Marketing Systems Corporation are proud to announce the opening of the EcoMall, the first "green shopping center" in cyberspace.

The EcoMall will help preserve the environment WHILE ELIMINATING THE COST AND WASTE OF PRINTING PAPER CATALOGS AND THE INCONVENIENCE AND EXPENSE OF TRADITIONAL SHOPPING.

The EcoMall exclusively markets ecologically-sound merchandise that will help save the planet's limited resources. In addition, the EcoMall offers free information from the environmental community on current issues, a classified directory and a business services section.

According to the EcoMall's President Thomas P. Kay, "Every day is Earth Day on the EcoMall. The time has come for people to incorporate their environmental concerns into action in their everyday life. The EcoMall offers the resources to an environmental way of living, all from the convenience of their home computer."

The EcoMall represents the leading companies in the environmental movement, offering a wide variety of green products, including biodegradable earth-friendly cleansers, organic foods, air and water purifiers, energy-saving life bulbs and refrigerators, recycled paper products, natural lines of hair and body products, homeopathic medicines, organic cotton clothing, solar-powered products, electric vehicles, books and novelties....

To show our commitment to the environment, we will donate 3% of our profits to various environmental organizations.
