Volume two of react/review would not be possible without the many supporters and contributors who helped bring this volume to fruition, particularly amidst an ongoing global pandemic. We are indebted to our faculty advisor, Dr. Sylvester Okwunodu Ogbechie, for his support and guidance throughout the formation of this edition, especially in his efforts to ensure the journal's longevity. We thank the History of Art & Architecture Department at the University of California, Santa Barbara for providing an intellectual home that allows the editors of and contributors to this journal to shape and share their scholarly voices. Within the department, our special gratitude goes to our department chair, Dr. Laurie Monahan; our graduate advisor, Dr. Richard Wittman; Jackie Spafford and Christine Fritsch for their invaluable advice in all matters relating to images and technology; and Christian Brown for his administrative support. We are also grateful to Sonja Sekely-Rowland at UC Riverside for her insightful thinking on the history and current state of fair use practices. Likewise, we want to thank Rachel Lee with eScholarship at the University of California, and Chizu Morihara, art librarian at the University of California, Santa Barbara, for assisting us with the publication process. We also acknowledge spotlight contributors Sara Morris and Elizabeth Driscoll Smith for their efforts in organizing the 2021 Art History Graduate Student Association Symposium, which served as the catalyst for this volume, and from which papers were developed into feature articles in this edition. We also thank Felicity Good and Taylor Van Doorne, the founders of this journal, and Taylor for her ongoing role as the journal's publication liaison, as well as Leslie Huang and Iman Salty for their role as our image permissions liaisons. Finally, this volume would not be possible without the tireless efforts made by the authors and editors who molded this year's edition of the journal into a thought-provoking inquiry about the relationship between the political and the otherworldly not only as art historical forces, but as currents that shape our lived experiences.
