ABOUT THE UCLA CRIMINAL JUSTICE LAW REVIEW

The UCLA Criminal Justice Law Review (CJLR) focuses on current topics in criminal law, policy, and practice. CJLR seeks to develop a discourse regarding criminal justice by publishing articles, editorials, and interviews of practitioners, academics, and policymakers.

CJLR also aims to foster community and highlight new perspectives on criminal justice by hosting a regular symposium for students, academics, practitioners, policymakers, and judges. In 2021, CJLR was proud to host a symposium focusing on restorative justice in partnership with numerous law schools across the country: Restorative Justice Origins, Applications, and Futures. CJLR is pleased to include excerpts from our symposium speakers' contributions in Volume 6. Additionally, in connection with our symposium theme of restorative justice, CJLR is proud to public works from Success Stories Program, a restorative justice program born out of California prisons. Furthermore, to highlight the voices of those directly impacted by the carceral system, this volume also includes selected essays from the Emancipation Initiative, a group of community members in Massachusetts dedicated to ending life without parole sentences.

CJLR is committed to the accessibility of its materials by making all publications available online for free. The CJLR editorial board is composed of students from UCLA School of Law and functions with the support of the UCLA School of Law faculty and administration.
