ABOUT THE UCLA CRIMINAL JUSTICE LAW REVIEW

The UCLA Criminal Justice Law Review (CJLR) focuses on current topics in criminal law, policy, and practice. CJLR seeks to develop a discourse regarding criminal justice by publishing articles, editorials, and interviews of practitioners, academics, and policymakers.

CJLR also works to foster community and highlight new perspectives on criminal justice by hosting a regular symposium for students, academics, practitioners, policymakers, and judges. In September 2023, the UCLA Criminal Justice Law Review supported the work of individuals and organizations committed to ending mass incarceration and immigration detention by sponsoring the Decarceral Visions Conference, a two-day symposium hosted at UCLA School of Law designed to confront important questions in the work of closing or preventing construction of jails, prisons, and immigration detention centers. The event was co-hosted by the American Civil Liberties Union, Detention Watch Network, the Sentencing Project, Vera Institute of Justice, UCLA Law's Criminal Justice Program, and UCLA Law's Prison Law and Policy Program. CJLR is pleased to include excerpts from the panels in Volume 8.

CJLR is committed to the accessibility of its materials by making all publications available online for free. The CJLR editorial board is composed of students from UCLA School of Law and functions with the support of the UCLA School of Law faculty and administration.
