

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Chicano-Latino Law Review would like to extend special thanks to Professor Henry McGee Jr.¹ and the students of his course in Law and Development in Latin America. Professor McGee developed the idea to publish an issue on Latin American economic issues and without his encouragement and assistance this issue would not have been possible.

We would also like to extend our appreciation to Antonio Gonzalez, Director of Latin America Project, of the Southwest Voter Research Institute for assisting us in gathering materials on the proposed U.S.-Mexico Free Trade Agreement. And a special acknowledgment to our 1992-1993 Board, who worked diligently through their summer break to publish this issue.

1. Professor of Law, UCLA School of Law.
