

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

There are many people who helped make this issue possible, including some tremendous efforts in coordinating the conference held on February 6, 1993. Special thanks to Sonia Rubio Sharma, Carlos Escobedo, and Aide Cabeza without whom the conference would not have taken place. Needless to say, the individual staff members of 1991-92 and 1992-93 were also instrumental in this effort.

We must also acknowledge the support of conference sponsors: Asian/Pacific Islander Law Student Association; Henry Barbosa and Barbosa, Garcia & Barnes; Best, Best & Krieger; La Raza Law Students Association, Ricardo F. Muñoz, National Black Law Journal, Daniel A. Olivas, and Sonia Rubio Sharma. The following individuals and organizations contributed in various ways to our efforts: Nancy Berkowitz, Leticia Cabeza, David Candelaria, Raquel De La Rocha, Nancy Fink, Elizabeth Guillen, La Raza Alumni Association, Philip Montez, José Padilla, Michael Perez, Dean Susan Westerberg Prager, Johnny Pugh, Catherine Sherry Taylor, and Robin Toma.

A special note of gratitude is in order for all the speakers and authors contributing to this issue for their patience and cooperation, and to our advisor Cruz Reynoso for his guidance.

Finally, the 1993-94 staff of the Chicano-Latino Law Review has had a tireless dedication to this publication. We recognize specifically the efforts of Omar Sandoval, Norma Osorio, Liliana Gonzalez and Daniel Villalpando, who not only spent their entire summer break publishing Volume 13—from the first to last stage of production—but then went straight to work on this issue.

If we have inadvertently left anyone out, we offer an apology and our deepest gratitude for your help.
