

THE NATIONAL BLACK LAW JOURNAL

---

Volume 27:1

2017–2018

---

CONTENTS

EDITOR'S NOTE & ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Caleb Jackson and Ashlee Hamilton . . . . . vii

ARTICLES

COULD THE STATE TAKEOVER OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS CREATE A STATE-CREATED DANGER? THEORIZING AT THE INTERSECTION OF STATE TAKEOVER DISTRICTS, THE SCHOOL-TO-PRISON PIPELINE, AND RACIAL OPPRESSION

Steven Nelson . . . . . 1

ANNALISE KEATING'S PORTRAYAL AS A BLACK ATTORNEY IS THE REAL SCANDAL: EXAMINING HOW THE USE OF STEREOTYPICAL DEPICTIONS OF BLACK WOMEN CAN LEAD TO THE FORMATION OF IMPLICIT BIASES

Shamar Toms-Anthony . . . . . 43

---

Published by the National Black Law Journal, UCLA School of Law, 405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, California, 90095-1476. Partial funding provided by the UCLA Graduate Students Association. Please direct inquiries to nblj@lawnet.ucla.edu.

The National Black Law Journal (NBLJ) has been committed to scholarly discourse exploring race and the law since 1970, when five Black law students and two Black law professors formed the journal in the wake of the Civil Rights Movement. NBLJ was the first journal in the country dedicated to studying the intersection of law and race.

©2018 by the National Black Law Journal