

UCSD UNDERGRADUATE LAW REVIEW

VOLUME 2

SPRING 2024

ARTICLES

- The Wrongful Arrest Theory: Justice For Individuals With Diabetes In Criminal Law Procedure 4
Rachel McChesney
- HIPAA: A Demand to Modernize Health Legislation 22
Mehri Sadri
- Inconsistent Solutions Don't Fix Persistent Problems: How Affirmative and Enthusiastic Consent Undermine Consent Laws Within Universities 49
Lauren Younk
- Balancing Acts: Navigating the Ethical and Legal Challenges of Genomic Medicine in Healthcare 73
Eugene Kong
- The Legal Landscape of Healthcare Access in Rural America 90
Shyan Khan
- The House of Representatives Needs to Expand 114
Atreya Ghatak
- Opposite Ends: Why the United States and Singapore have Drastically Different Models of Free Speech 136
Dylan Chamberlin
- Book Censorship in Public Schools: Examining Florida HB 1467 (2022) 182
Kacie Li
- Privacy and Precedent: Exploring the Factors Influencing the U.S. Supreme Court's Departures from Precedent 209
Luna Gilson

UCSD UNDERGRADUATE LAW REVIEW

VOLUME 2

EDITORIAL BOARD

SPRING 2024

Editor-in-Chief

Abhinav Muralidharan

Theresa Rincker

Managing Editors

Hannah Uribe

Ivy Peng

Josh Kao

Megan Barrett

Sneha Subhash Menon

Business Director

Anna Stone

Dina Zhi

Editors

Emma Zucker-Murray

Brian Lee

Chloe Burrows

Chloe McLean

Frida Luna

Hung G. Le

Keiko Dickens

Natalie Fong

Shyam Kulkarni

FOREWORD

We are thrilled to present the second volume of the Undergraduate Law Review at UC San Diego. Over the past year, we have had the privilege of recruiting a talented group of student authors and nurturing their interest in legal scholarship and argument. Their remarkable achievements uphold this journal's commitment to publishing impactful works.

The first half of this volume focuses on issues in health, leveraging the strength of our institution in science, technology, and medical research. Our authors explore topics including the legal challenges in genomic medicine and the implications of developments in cybersecurity for health legislation. The second half presents innovative perspectives on current debates in civil liberties. These articles highlight the unique strengths of undergraduate publications: a broad interdisciplinary reach and the fresh insights of emerging scholars.

We would like to thank Professor Nichter for her support and guidance this year, from providing feedback on articles to connecting us with legal professionals. Her support has offered our members foundational experiences as they begin their careers in law. Annelise Sklar has been instrumental in our legal research instruction and in the publication of this issue. We extend our gratitude to our managing editors for their dedication to their writers and editors — this volume would not have been possible without them. Finally, we express our deepest appreciation to the student members who dedicated countless hours of their busy weeks to produce quality and impactful legal articles. We believe that the rigorous standards and dedication of our members will be evident to any reader.

Theresa Rincker and Abhinav Muralidharan
Editors-in-Chief
UCSD Undergraduate Law Review – Volume II