

FAMINE: NOT A MEDIA EVENT

by

Fassil Demissie

As men women and children
Lie gazing into the empty sky Groaning in hunger induced pain, Sympathizers swarm around like locusts To observe the ravages of famine and drought

Others stampede from a multitude of places around the globe Shedding their tears and telling each other about the sorry affairs of the land called Ethiopia Others are struck speechless, alarmed and ashamed that such a catastrophe is happening today

Sympathizers clamor around the feeding camps
--as if their presence alone would subdue death
...the terrible beast that ferociously and indiscriminately devours men, women and children

Rumors have filtered through the refugee centers as the starving people witness the slow, painful ebbing away of the life force in their families and friends
Who will be next Will there be enough food for tomorrow

Yes, columns of contrite witnesses flock from distant lands - clergy, doctors, movie actors, journalists and politicians - to see, touch, and feel the texture of the tragedy To capture a news event
To mount an appeal for aid
To give donations
To profit from this misery and death or
To tell the truth about the starvation in Ethiopia
