

NOMAD

by

Rashidah Ismaili

She has learned to call home convenient spots where a cloth can be laid abody can stretch out..... home.

She has come to call a kitchen any pile that can ignite and sear a chance bird or greens offered by kindness.. a meal.

She has come to know water by urine smells and snakes, mosquitoes and call it god's blessings.

She has come to call a distant being a god because there are no icons dependable on two feet.

She has walked because space did not permit sitting and to crawl would have been sinfull since ther are no rituals a nomad is obliged to honour.
