

Acknowledgements

We wish to express our immense gratitude to the former Editor-in-Chief, Teshome H. Gabriel. If there is somebody who can take sole credit for UFAHAMU's increasing international acceptance as a potent factor in African studies, that person is Teshome. He has put in a tremendous amount of effort and dedication in the cause of the journal. Unfortunately, journals of this sort (which aspire to professional excellence but have to be run on non-professional lines) depend on editors who come and go like birds of passage.

We also wish to acknowledge our indebtedness to Edward Ferguson who has been one of our staunchest and most active supporters. Although he has been busy completing his dissertation for a UCLA Ph.D. in history, he has been immensely helpful in promoting UFAHAMU's circulation and always obliges us with many insightful suggestions.

The photographs of Amilcar Cabral (including the one on the front cover) are reproduced here with the permission of the Radio and Visual Services Division of the United Nations.

Our thanks also go to Mr. John Hubbard who took the 'Cabral Memorial' pictures and advised us on layout.
